Bethel Water District is forced to issue weekend 'boil order'

By WENDY HANSCOM

About 1,500 Bethel Water District customers were under order Friday and Saturday to boil their drinking water.

The water in the system was never actually harmful, claimed water district Trustee Bob Saunders, but it was temporarily unchlorinated, necessitating the boil order.

But while the water remained safe, some local residents and restaurateurs were unhappy with the way the water district communicated the problem (see box).

Saunders said the problem began when a chlorine pump failed Thursday morning at 10:40 a.m. Normally a chlorine analyzer in Northwest Bethel, where the water tunnels into the system from Chapman Brook, would have sensed that no chlorine was entering the system, he said.

The low chlorine reading should then have triggered a valve to close, so that no untreated water entered the system. Water to supply customers would have been drawn from the Water district's response faulted

"Too little, too late," was how some Bethel restaurant owners and operators characterized Saturday's water district notification that they and their customers were using untreated water.

They complain that by the time the failure was discovered on Friday, Bethel customers had been using unchlorinated water for nearly a full day.

They also argue that the water district could have been far more aggressive in communicating with businesses about the problem—for example, by using the telephone.

Joe Croteau, owner of Carmela's Restaurant and Sue Burnham of Mother's Restaurant are collecting signatures on a petition, which asks the Public Utilities Commission to investigate how the district handled public notification.

DEP chief will meet with G'wood officials on tire site license

But selectmen plan to go ahead with legal action to force site to comply with town ordinance

By MICHAEL DANIELS

Dean Marriott, commissioner of the Maine Department of Environmental Protection, has agreed to meet directly with Greenwood selectmen next week to hear their concerns regarding the licensing of Peter Gordon's tire storage site on the Rabbit Road.

State representative Richard Bennett, R-Norway, who arranged the meeting, said it will give the selectmen a chance to make their objections known "at the highest level of the department."

Bennett said that Marriott has promised that no decision will be made on Gordon's application until the selectmen have had a chance to make their case.

Gordon has been operating tire storage and/or disposal sites in Albany since at least 1981. The DEP currently estimates that he has from 540,000 to 640,000 stored at sites in Albany and Greenwood.

For the past five years the DEP has been working with him to get the Greenwood site licensed. Gordon has claimed that once the license is granted he will move the tires from the

Greenwood voters say 'no' to change in sale of tax-acquired property

By WENDY HANSCOM

Greenwood voters have decided to keep control over the disposal of the town's tax-acquired property.

As a result of a vote at a special town meeting last week, the town will keep its present system of handling properties with matured tax liens. That system calls for such properties to be put out to bid, or for the delinquent tax-

Military overflights could get a lot closer over Bethel

Air Force and Nat'l Guard propose lowering western Maine's 7,000 foot operations floor to only 300 feet

Some sleek new visitors may be dropping in on this part of western Maine, but not everyone is delighted.

The Air Force has proposed a plan calling for lowering the operations floor in the Condor Military Operations Area—from the present level of 7,000 feet down to 300 feet.

The 200-square-mile Condor operations area stretches from Greenville in the north to just south of Bethel.

The area is used for a variety of military training purposes and by various types of fighters and bombers—most of which currently fly too high to be very apparent, except to someone who happens to be looking up as they go by.

The Air Force, however, has recently proposed dropping the floor in the operations area, in order to accommodate the training needs of F-16s now being assigned to bases in Connecticut and Massachusetts.

The Air Force argues that the lower ceilings are necessary if the low-altitude bombers are to be able to conduct realistic training exercises, especially training for flying in under

With help from technology, the world is an open book for local unsighted musician

Jim Stoner of Bethel has a new voice to guide him through his sightless world.

Stoner, blind since birth, recently purchased a new Xerox/Kurzweil Personal Reader.

Before the reader came into his life Stoner would ask friends or acquaintances to read to him. But now, "the scanner makes me independent of human beings to read to me," he said.

The computerized system includes a scanner—it looks like a small personal copier—which scans a page of machine-printed material. A computerized voice then vocalizes the words from the printed page.

Stoner uses a reading keypad to program the computer system. He can choose one of nine different voice settings and also control how fast the voice reads to him.

The computer's memory stores up to 8,000 characters, or about 30 pages of a novel, Stoner said. When the machine is turned off, its memory is

Opinions

We'll survive—as a community

We'll have our favorite two-kinds-of-people-in-the-world distinctions. Men and women, liberals and conservatives, people who eat white bread and people who won't—take your pick. But a friend of ours, wise in the ways of the world, says that none of these really count.

What matters, she claims, is a little known variation in the genes determining an individual's decision-making tactics. Some people are born with their DNA tuned to yellow legal pads, sharp pencils and creative solitude—or so she contends—while others are genetically disposed toward flip charts, magic markers and group grope.

The two types are seldom able to communicate, she argues, and in most cases are better off not trying.

We confess to being fully of the former phenotype, trapped in a small room with flip charts and earnest brainstormers. Our own brain begins to feel like one of the bloody pieces of meat that flip chart sheets were originally intended to wrap.

But now might be a very good time for all of us to try to push beyond such feelings, and to attempt to bridge some destructive gaps that seem to be widening in our lovely towns—between the local regulators and the regulated, between businesses and town officials, between those who profit directly from the tourist industry and those who don't, between those who mourn NTL's passing and those who are grateful not to have to listen any longer to those oh-so-heavy conversations in local restaurants.

The task force that is now meeting on Sunday evenings can provide a badly needed forum for helping to correct these destructive, and needless polarizations.

And at a time when the local political dialogue seems increasingly dominated by pettiness and sniping (witness Bethel's annual town meeting), the task force offers a chance to discuss our mutual concerns for the area in a positive yet realistic context. To build some bridges for the future instead of burning them, and to try to restore the comity that is essential to community.

But if the task force is to accomplish anything worthwhile, it must reflect the real diversity of the area—not just the usual mix of well-scrubbed businesspeople and workshop junkies, but also people with dirt under their fingernails and, perhaps, dark mutterings in their heart about the direction the Bethel area appears to be taking.

We don't need another chamber of commerce; we do need some frank communication, and perhaps some fresh perspectives.

NTL, meanwhile, is leaving. Off, amongst other lofty quests, to swell the hungry hoard of grant grubbers, program hustlers and widget salesmen setting out to capitalize the Soviet Union, or what's left of it.

We wish them well. Perhaps where Napoleon and Hitler failed, T-grouping will prevail.

Perhaps not. Perhaps NTL, or the individuals who happen to sit on its board at some point in the future, will look back and realize that "the kind of place you see on slick brochures" also tends to be a rather soulless kind of place.

But even if NTL's future does lie in the East, or in diaspora, or even at Club Med, our future is still right here.

Back in the Bethel area, we know what we've got. Or we should. And we also know it's our responsibility to protect it and do what we can to preserve its prosperity without seeing it lose its soul.

The task force is an excellent place to start. Perhaps the organizers can even arrange to have a few legal pads handy.

My Aunt Ruth

She would come up from Boston to visit when I was a young girl on a farm in Newry. A classy lady with pretty clothes, attractive make up and handsome jewelry—all the things which intrigued me and which I hoped one day I, too, would be and have. She'd always bring everyone in my family wonderful gifts, a tradition she maintained over the years. What fun it was being with her.

I, since, have concluded that, decades before the term became popular, she was my "role model." She graduated from our own Gould Academy and made her way to college where she prepared for a career as a dietitian. She became a professional woman employed in a big city in the late 1920s.

During World War II, I, too, went to Boston. During the rigors of my nursing school education, she and Uncle Richard opened their home to my classmates and me. How we enjoyed their hospitality and her marvelous homecooking. Always giving of herself, she would bake brownies, toll-house cookies, pies and cakes to send back to school with us. The entire floor of my dorm would await our return to share the goodies. What a reputation she earned over the years for those homebaked sweets, as well as her generosity and thoughtfulness.

Throughout the years she was an ardent supporter of my family and me, cheering us on for accomplishments big and small. She possessed a unique knack for enthusiastically encouraging me in the various ventures of my life. I could always count on her interest in what I was doing and her steadfast support of my endeavors.

And how she loved the Bethel area. Family weekends and vacations were almost always spent at "Island Cottage" on North Pond at Locke Mills. Upon retirement, she and Uncle Richard chose to return to Bethel where they grew up. They built the sunshine yellow Cape on Bridge Street not far from her sister (my mother, "Liz" Wright). And for a short time, till mother died, the three of them enjoyed life tremendously. "The girls," as Uncle Richard called them, loved to drive around the mountains and the back roads. He would only have to jingle the car keys, when a picnic basket would be prepared and off they'd go. Her love for the beautiful nature around her was evident when, from the picture window of the sunshine house, she would survey "her mountains" as if she were seeing their beauty for the first time ever.

My recollections of my Aunt Ruth are simply wonderful and they comfort me as I say, "Till we meet again, dear lady."

Letters to the editor

WATER DISTRICT TOO FLIP WITH OUR CUSTOMERS' RISK

To the Editor:

Kudos to the Bethel Water District for the recent "Boil Order."

The facts are comforting. That we received the facts three days after the fact is not so comforting.

A residential customer has the luxury of assuming their own risk level. The voluntary assumption of risk requires only the individual to suffer (or not to suffer) any consequences.

A business customer (i.e. restaurant, hotel, motel, inn, conference center, B & B, medical or dental office, grocery store, etc.) cannot participate in risk on a voluntary level. To do so places paying customers at involuntary risk. Involuntary risk is dirty pool, guys. Isn't there sound reasoning behind defining failure of the water treatment facility "a disaster"?

I don't know of an operating business on Main Street that provides television (for employees or customers) where that television is turned to the public access cable channel: you didn't get the message on MTV or NESN. Muzak may not be provided by local radio stations. Saturday's Lewiston paper—a day too late. Telephone? Why not?

If such occurrences are defined as disasters, then we need a disaster plan that addresses the needs of all Bethel Water District customers. We need to implement the plan each time the need arises.

Please remember that one time the boy "cried wolf" when the wolf was real. The problem was that nobody listened. Please don't be so flip about the public's right to know.

WATCH WHERE YOU'RE GOING!

To the Editor:

I think the townsfolk in Bethel have been remarkably patient with the workmen who have been disrupting Main Street and other downtown streets. I understand that the businesses in the area have suffered. The work is difficult and I'm appreciative of that fact and that the village is in dire need of a new sewer system.

However, the arrogant disregard of our traffic laws became painfully apparent to me today.

1. I turned into Spring Street from Main (the proper direction on the one way street). One of the SDI pickups met me coming the wrong way. To say the least I was startled to have it loom up in front of me. I wondered if it could have avoided the young mother who came up that way just a bit later walking with her two children, one in a stroller.

2. After watching with frustration the innumerable times that the front loader rig has come out the entrance to the IGA despite the signs that say do not exit, I decided to ask the driver why he did so. His response was the use of the "F" word. He added no one else pays attention to the sign, so why should he!

The fact that the daily trip to town becomes an exercise in exploration has been sort of fun, a source for amused comments at the IGA checkout. When it becomes apparent that these people really don't seem to care HOW they work it ceases to be amusing.

NTL IS NO BIG LOSS

To the Editor:

One would think that all the fuss that is being made about the NTL pulling out of Bethel that some sort of a cataclysm had hit the town. Their leaving may be bad for some and a hardship for others, but you have to realize that the town survived for 174 years before they came here and I think we will survive a few more years, that is, if the environmentalists don't drive us down the road to ruin. They already have a good start at doing so.

The question was asked—what was it that they would like to see here? We had trains going east and west, bus service from Portland to Colebrook, N.H., Bethel to Lewiston and from Bethel to Rumford. We had three taxis in town. We had a nice movie theater where they could view a first rate film and a bowling alley where they could try their skills.

We had 10-12 stores and shops on Main Street.

I don't blame the NTL for leaving, for there isn't much here for them now. Where was the liaison committee and the task force when we lost our shoe shop, Western Auto, L.E. Davis Lumber Co., Hanover Dowel Co., Roberts Poultry Farm and the garment factory?

Did they do anything to keep them in business? No, they didn't. Bethel needs industry and we need it bad. Don't expect the Chamber of Commerce to do anything about it. Their only interest is B&B's, Sunday River Ski Resort (Newry) and passing out a few medallions now and then.

How many graduated from Telstar this year and what were their job prospects? Lets look back 40-50 years. Everyone was happy then, even the taxpayers, not so today.

By the looks of all the laws, rules and regulations in Bethel, maybe we should erect a Concentina and change the name to Andersonville.

There may be those that took advantage of the NTL and I wish them luck in their new venture.

THIS WEEK AT THE Moses Mason House

All members and friends of the Bethel Historical Society are reminded that the next month meeting will be held on Thursday, July 4 and will feature the annual picnic.

The meeting will be held at historic East Bethel Church; lemonade will be provided by the Society. The picnic will begin at 6 p.m. and the meeting at 7:30.

Featured during the program portion of the meeting will be an impersonation of the famed Civil War general Joshua Chamberlain, a Maine man, who later served as Governor of Maine and President of Bowdoin College.

Charles Plummer will be present as General Chamberlain; he is well-known throughout Maine for his portrayal of various historical figures. Anyone wishing to join Society members for the picnic and the meeting is cordially urged to do so.

The gown worn at Andrew Jackson's inaugurations in 1833 and one worn at his inaugural ball of the same year by Agnes Straw Mason (1793-1869), wife of Dr. Moses Mason were presented to the Society this week by Ruth Farrell of Dover, N.H., daughter of the donor Eugenia Shorrock, who bought them at the auction held before the house was acquired by the Society in 1974.

Dr. Mason was elected to Congress in 1832 and with his wife attended Jackson's second inauguration in March of 1835. These gowns will now be on display at the Dr. Moses Mason House for those interested in seeing them.

The Dr. Moses Mason House Museum will open for the summer season the first week in July and continue with its regular summer schedule (Tuesday through Sunday, 1-4 p.m.) until Labor Day. Tours at other times and on Monday may be arranged by calling 824-2898.

DEP to issue ozone alerts

Summer fun is diminished for some people by the seasonal presence of ground-level ozone. Although certain segments of the population are more susceptible than others, even healthy people working or exercising outdoors can experience respiratory problems when concentrations are elevated. To enable the public to take appropriate precautions, the state Department of Environmental Protection will issue "ozone advisories" as needed through Oct. 1. These alerts will be issued when monitors in south central Maine indicate the ozone concentrations have reached 0.08 parts per million (ppm). The threshold is lower than that set by the federal government (0.12 ppm), but state officials believe that it is the point at which human health begins to be noticeably affected. An advisory that air quality is "unhealthy" is a recommendation that people with heart or lung disease reduce physical exertion and outdoor activity.

DEP tracks ozone levels between April 1 and Oct. 1 when the concentrations are highest. Because much of the ozone monitored in Maine is transported up the coast from southern cities, DEP reviews data collected elsewhere in the northeast region to anticipate when in-state ozone levels are likely to be elevated.

At 2:47 p.m. a Middle Intervale resident reported that her son was nearly run off the road by a log truck on the Middle Intervale Road.

FIRST RUN THROUGH ROUGH WATERS—Elizabeth O'Meara, left, and her son Mike make their first run through white water on the Androscoggin River in Errol N.H. The O'Mearas, Cindy Moxie and Linda Yates participated in a white water canoeing course sponsored by Mahoosuc Mountain Adventures and coordinated by SAD #44 Adult Education Office. They were given classroom instruction on Friday. On Saturday the group learned white water strokes and maneuvers, and practiced on some small rapids. On Sunday they applied what they had learned on the bigger rapids that flow under the bridge over the Androscoggin in Errol. Kevin Slater of Mahoosuc Mountain Adventures said he hopes to run a similar program next year and is considering offering a beginning dogsledding and winter camping course this winter. Water District reservoir on Paradise Hill.

But, said Saunders, the chlorine analyzer also failed and the shut-off valve was left open.

The failure was not discovered until 9 a.m. Friday, during daily routine testing. By then, Bethel customers had been using unchlorinated water for about 24 hours.

The pump was fixed, and the Water District notified the Department of Human Services, which ordered that the boil order be given.

Word of the boil order spread slowly. It was announced on four local radio stations, published in Saturday's Lewiston Sun-Journal and broadcast on public access cable Channel IV. From there it spread by word of mouth.

"Those people who took the boil order as a dire emergency were right in doing so," Saunders said. "On the other hand, some people realized that the worst we were talking about was drinking water out of Chapman Brook. This had been going on almost a day already and the problem had been all repaired before the boil order was issued."

The water district said in a release explaining the necessity of a boil order, "It is difficult to imagine a situation which would be immediately threatening to health, but, if such should occur, the local emergency services would be used to spread the word much more quickly and thoroughly. If necessary, action would be taken to prevent delivery of any dangerous water. While this particular incident will be almost impossible to repeat, the new rules virtually guarantee that it will be necessary to cry wolf again."

Saunders said Monday, "I can't picture any combination of circumstances coming together that would result in a serious health hazard. We do take the possibility, however, very seriously. There are now regulations to know you've considered every possibility. We're basically trying to assemble a system that will be as close as humanly possible to failure proof."

The Water District tested the water in the system shortly after fixing the chlorine pump.

"The water in the system had to be found safe (by federal standards) in order to cancel the boil order," Saunders said. "Knowing everybody was anxious to get rid of the boil order and knowing the testing took 22 hours we decided to test right away—in the expectation the water would pass federally unsafe water standards. When tested, the water was actually already safe."

Saunders said some might have been happier with the untreated water. "My guess would be that 96 percent of people would rather drink water dipped from a bucket out of Chapman Brook than out of the faucet after it was treated."

In fact, until 1943 the water from Chapman Brook was not chlorinated, Saunders said. Water powered chlorine pumps were used from 1943 to 1970. In 1970 the district was ordered by DHS to install an electrically powered chlorine pump. In 1989 a backup generator was installed to run the pumps during power outages. From 1970 until the backup generator was installed, Saunders said, whenever the power went out the water went unchlorinated.

The district is facing new federal rulings that call for additional backup water treatment. Those rulings go into effect in December. The district has already installed a second chlorine pump, so that if the first pump fails the water would still be treated. But that pump was not in running order last week, Saunders said.

Along with the new federal ruling on backup facilities, matching rulings already in effect require public notification of any water safety concerns.

The town district said in a release explaining the necessity of a boil order, "It is difficult to imagine a situation which would be immediately threatening to health, but, if such should occur, the local emergency services would be used to spread the word much more quickly and thoroughly. If necessary, action would be taken to prevent delivery of any dangerous water. While this particular incident will be almost impossible to repeat, the new rules virtually guarantee that it will be necessary to cry wolf again."

Saunders said Monday, "I can't picture any combination of circumstances coming together that would result in a serious health hazard. We do take the possibility, however, very seriously. There are now regulations to know you've considered every possibility. We're basically trying to assemble a system that will be as close as humanly possible to failure proof."

unlicensed sites to Greenwood, and from there they will eventually be removed for recycling.

Two weeks ago, according to Brent McCarthy of the DEP's Division of Solid Waste Facilities Management, the agency was on the brink of approving Gordon's license application—a move which would have run counter to the agency's repeated assurances to local officials that they would be notified and given adequate time to provide input before any final decision was made.

Greenwood's selectmen have worried about the consequences of a fire at the site, the possibility of ground-water contamination, and the town's financial liability if Gordon should go out of business and leave the town to clean up the tire piles.

"I'm personally not against the idea of a tire recycling center," said selectmen Ray Seames, "but I just want to be sure it's run right and the town is protected."

But, Seames said, there has been little in the history of Gordon's tire operations or of the DEP's handling of the matter that would instill such confidence.

Gordon has repeatedly failed to comply with various orders from the town and DEP, and he recently paid a $1500 fine as part of a consent agreement with the agency. The consent agreement also contains deadlines for various cleanup activities, and provision for further fines should Gordon fail to meet those deadlines.

But in a June 27 letter to DEP, the selectmen wrote: "The tire facility has continued to operate in defiance of state and town regulations as well as stop orders from both the Town of Greenwood and Department of Environmental Protection. We have no reason to believe the mere issuing of a license will result in compliance with it."

The town has its own ordinance governing such sites, but the selectmen say they have so far held off on enforcing it, choosing instead to see what action the DEP would take.

Town officials now say they are through waiting. The letter to DEP continues: "In 1990 the town started legal action to bring the tire facility into compliance with town ordinances."

At the request of Brent McCarthy, the town deferred further action to allow the state more time to act. It seems that the town has failed to benefit from this "silent partnership" and that most of our concerns remain unaddressed. Therefore the town intends to pursue compliance with its ordinances through its attorney and the legal system."

Bennett said that Marriott hoped to use the meeting, which is set for June 11 in Augusta, as an opportunity to look at the facts of the matter, and also at the way the agency has handled both the application and its dealings with the town.

Marie Bartlett, chairman of the Greenwood board, said all three selectmen plan to attend the meeting. "All we want is to be heard," she said.

erased, but a tape recorder can record the voice and then the text can be played back later.

Stoner has had the machine for about a month and is quickly learning to use it efficiently. The only difficulty he has with it, he said, is getting it to scan newspapers.

Because the newspaper is thin, he said, the scanner will try to read both sides of the copy as it scans the page. It is also difficult to line up newspaper columns in the scanner because of the oversized pages, he added.

One of the first large-scale tasks Stoner is undertaking is to translate a ham radio owner's manual into braille. In order to do that, he has the equipment read the owner's manual to him, while he transcribes the text into braille with a braille typewriter.

"With something as technical as the manual can get, it's better to have it in braille," he said.

Stoner said before purchasing the equipment he would have had to write to the ham radio company and ask for an audio tape or braille copy of the manual—which is seldom available—or have someone read him the copy.

Stoner has been a ham radio operator for about a year and has made contacts as far away as Japan. In addition to being a radio enthusiast, he is also an avid skier, swimmer, scuba diver and golfer.

Stoner said he was born in England and moved to Chatham, Ontario in 1946. After graduating from the University of Windsor in 1964, he moved to Detroit then on to Grand Rapids, Mich.

From his graduation to 1982, he earned his living singing and playing piano in hotels and lounges. His travels took him across the American Midwest and back to Canada. His gigs usually lasted six or eight weeks, then he was on to the next town.

He came to Bethel in 1982, when he was contracted by the Bethel Inn to play piano for the summer.

He said he found the friendly and relaxed community of Bethel appealing, so when the inn offered to extend his contract, he stayed. For the past nine years he has worked and lived at the Bethel Inn, playing piano in the Main Dining Room and in the Mill Brook Tavern.

Stoner, however, will soon be on the move, if not very far. He will be leaving the Bethel Inn this month and moving into the L'Auberge Country Inn across the street. There he will continue to entertain the inn's guests with old standards, Broadway show tunes, semi-classical works, ragtime, contemporary pop and jazz.

NEW VOICE—Jim Stoner of Bethel sits in front of his older braille typewriter, which is surrounded by his new personal reader scanning equipment. The equipment is able to scan any machine printed page and then vocalize the print.

Town meeting

payers to ask for a special town meeting.

The taxpayer must then plead his case directly to the town's residents, and, if they approve, buy back the property for the taxes, penalties, lien costs and any stipulations the selectmen wish to impose.

At last week's meeting, the Greenwood selectmen asked for the authority, in some cases, to go ahead and sell the properties back to their owners without going first to the voters.

Selectman Marie Bartlett said one example of a situation in which selectmen might have used the proposed authority would be if a mistake had been made by the town office, such as an oversight in billing or tax payments credited to the wrong year.

But the 16 voters who turned out for the meeting saw little reason to change the present system.

Town Clerk Phyllis Coolidge said the proposal made little sense to her. "I don't particularly feel too bad," Coolidge said, for delinquent taxpayers. She contended that those who have liens placed on their properties get plenty of advance notice of the town's intentions.

Tax Assessor Herb Dunham called for the town to place a penalty on the repurchase of town-held properties. He suggested that 10 percent of the real estate value be assessed. "Maybe people would think twice before they allow a lien to mature," Dunham said.

Voters tried to amend the article to include such a penalty, but moderator Steve Wright would not allow the amendment, ruling that the article dealt directly with ownership and not assessing penalties.

After returning to the original article and voting it down, residents urged selectmen to rewrite the article with a penalty clause for consideration at a future town meeting.

Because the article failed, two Greenwood residents with tax liens on enemy radar.

In the Bethel area there are already military training flights lower than 7,000 feet. Most of these are confined to the ten-mile-wide VFR (visual flight rules) Route 840, which runs roughly north-south and passes over Locke Mills, then passes a few miles to the east of Bethel, crossing the Androscoggin River just west of Hanover.

Military pilots using VFR 840 are allowed to fly as close to the ground as they can, and most area residents are familiar with looking up and seeing fighter planes skimming the tree tops.

Also operating in the area are A-10s, a close-support attack aircraft which, because it usually flies at speeds less than 250 knots, is free to practice out-their properties then had to plead their cases to the voters. One delinquent taxpayer was a no show.

The voters agreed in all three cases to let taxpayers buy back their properties within 10 days. If they fail to do so within stipulated period, the selectmen reserve the right to sell the property by sealed bid.

When one delinquent taxpayer asked what stipulations might be placed by selectmen, Coolidge replied, "It might be anything."

Selectman Marie Bartlett said, for example, that the selectmen could retain part of the property or do anything else they felt was in the best interest of the town.

In other business, the town approved raising $5,000 for general assistance and $1,500 for maintenance of the East Twitchell Pond Road. Both these articles had been inadvertently left off the annual town meeting warrant, the selectmen said.

side airspace reserved for the military.

A-10s, which have a distinctive double stabilizer, are often seen operating in the area at extremely low levels.

There have been few complaints in this area about military planes operating too close to the ground or to buildings (they are supposed to stay at least 500 feet from any people or buildings).

But the military proposal to lower the Condor operations floor has drawn flak from the Western Maine Alliance, a regional economic-development group.

Alliance Executive Director Paul Lowe said his group is worried about the flights disturbing residents and wildlife, and driving away tourists.

"If you're out fishing on Rangeley Lake and a couple of planes go overhead 300 feet up, I'd imagine you might not come back again," he said.

Lowe also said he's worried that the public is confused by the vague and frequently conflicting explanations of military spokesmen attempting to sell the idea.

"It really seems to be a case of the right hand doesn't know what the left hand is doing," he said of his own attempts to learn more about the proposal.

Lowe said he is also concerned about how frequently military pilots violate the flight rules—for example, by "buzzing" occupied areas and small boats—and what actions, if any, the military takes to punish such violations.

He said that when he asked such questions, the military spokesmen "get real vague real fast."

The Maine National Guard is charged with setting up "scoping meetings" on the plan to drop the Condor floor. Capt. Peter Rogers, a spokesman for the Maine National Guard at Camp

Keyes in Augusta, said public comment carries "a lot" of weight in the final decision on the plan, which isn't expected to be made for at least a year.

But Lowe noted that only one such scoping meeting had originally been scheduled in Maine—in Presque Isle. "It was ridiculous to expect people to drive five hours to Presque Isle," Lowe said.

At the alliance's urging, a second meeting has now been scheduled for July 24, at the University of Maine at Farmington.

Lowe urged that anyone with experiences with low-flying military aircraft call the alliance, at 1-800-660-5869.

Steve and Lynda Chandler retire after 20-plus years at Gould

The framed polar bear presented to Steve Chandler for morning dips in Songo Pond since Gould Polar Bears started six years ago is a good symbol of the spirit that the Chandlers have brought to Gould in their 21 years.

Steve and Lynda have had a bear-like appetite for a myriad of endeavors at Gould and in the Bethel community.

From Steve's leadership at the inception of programs like Outward Bound and the Scandinavian exchange, to Lynda's involvement and terms as president of the Bethel Area Health Center and their combined efforts at instigating such projects as nordic skiing in the elementary schools and community skating rink, they have embodied the now almost unknown boarding school motto, "To serve them all our days."

Even now, as Steve and Lynda prepare for a move to Brunswick, serving Gould remains strongly in their minds. A Chandler family house and cottage in Bethel assure their future presence, not to mention Steve's promise to continue to mastermind the camping equipment logistics during fall orientation and the March Four Point program.

For the Chandlers, the polar bear symbol extends beyond swimming in icy water and going full bore into challenges, for in 1966 Steve came to Bowdoin for a year of graduate study which brought the whole family to Maine, and opened the way for them to make a permanent move to Gould from Merceders Academy in Pennsylvania in 1970.

And Steve's association with the Bowdoin, the state of Maine's official ship, began at age 17 when he accompanied arctic explorer Admiral Donald B. MacMillan on the ship to northern Labrador. (It was MacMillan who brought the polar bear mascot to Bowdoin.)

The service to the Bowdoin in the years since then well embodies the Chandler spirit of innovating and taking charge.

In 1980 Steve joined the board of the Schooner Boat Association, which restored the ailing vessel and eventually turned it over to the Maine Maritime Academy in Castine, as it became the state's official ship. In the meantime, Steve has brought the ship into service and even taught courses aboard her for Hurricane Island Outward Bound School.

The will to innovate has brought a richness to Gould over the last twenty years. The list of "Chandler programs" is long: "Outward Bound, foreign exchanges, trail crews, the ABC program, the ropes course, the Outing Club. What has been most important to him is the partnership with Lynda. "Doing it all as a team, when the boys were growing up, was the most satisfying part," he says.

The boys, for their part, were not immune to the energy that was being generated (Rick, Skip, and Pete each spent four years at Gould in addition to living on campus), and it is no accident that their inclinations run toward the adventurous and ambitious: ski jumping, oceanographic work, bungy jumping, international travel—anything outdoors and everything with the focus and enthusiasm of their parents. And in Peter's case the Gould faculty has also had the benefit of two highly stimulating years, which he is about to wrap up this fall when he marries and moves to the West.

The whole family played a key role at Gould. At a time when boarding schools suffered from societal upheaval in the seventies, Gould was able to weather the storm remarkably well, and a family with strong values and convictions made an impact that cannot be easily gauged.

Steve attributes Gould's current strength as an institution to the team of people that joined the faculty in the early seventies (Steve was hired as assistant headmaster in 1970), many of whom form the heart of the faculty today. "It was a most troubled era, but strong faculty were hired, which has made a tremendous difference today," says Steve.

In Steve's case, despite his passion for extracurriculars, the classroom wasn't neglected. The faculty had gained a personable teacher who made math palatable for many who had thought it otherwise, by conversing in terms like "mouse and rat

Waste reduction tips for summer visitors offered

The Maine Waste Management Agency in cooperation with the Bureau of Parks and Recreation is promoting a waste reduction program focusing on Maine's summer visitors.

Last year, the Bureau of Parks and Recreation adopted a carry-in/carry-out policy at 31 day-use state parks and 15 historic sites. The program was well received and park officials attribute its success to the overwhelming support from park users.

New this year is a pilot recycling program at Camden Hills State Park. Park staff will be asking campers to separate their recyclables and place them in specially marked containers. Park officials would eventually like to expand the program to include all camping areas in the state park system.

The Bureau of Parks and Recreation and the Maine Waste Management Agency are also offering a brochure of waste-reduction tips for campers and recreationalists. Some tips to help reduce waste include: bring picnic foods in reusable containers; bring reusable dishes, cups, and utensils; avoid individually packaged items, such as a single cheese wrappers, single-serving cereal boxes, or single-serving snack foods; avoid disposable items, such as razors, lighters, cameras, or stereo cans; use refillable liquid fuel stoves and lanterns.

To obtain a copy of the brochure, call the Bureau of Parks and Recreation at 207-289-3821 or the Maine Waste Management Agency at 207-289-5300.

squared" and bartering with Gummy Bears for many years. (A ten pound bag of the chewy candy bears appeared on Lynda's desk this spring—perhaps Steve's fondest farewell present!)

There are many good memories, but an equal number of prospects for the coming years. Besides trips back to Gould to help with the outdoor program logistics, and the recreational potential in having the Bowdoin tennis courts and field house a short walk away, there are other possibilities: work for SEA (the Sea Educational Association), the Audubon Society or Nature Conservancy, and studies in future options for private education in America.

As to the latter, there cannot be found better expertise than the Chandlers.

It is an area in which they have specialized for all their lives.

State fire marshal says be careful with fireworks

The State Fire Marshal's Office said 36 people were injured by fireworks during the past two years in Maine and is has urged consumers to use caution during the upcoming July Fourth holiday.

Fire Marshal Don Bisset said sparklers and caps are the only legal fireworks allowed in Maine, but the majority of the injuries during the past two years were caused by the mishandling of other types of fireworks.

The fire marshal said there were 13 reported injuries from fireworks during 1990 and 23 injuries the previous year. Bisset said the youngest person injured last year was a two-year-old who grabbed a lit sparkler and the oldest person was a 39-year-old injured by a homemade firecracker.

Bisset said, "Nationally, 12,000 people are injured by fireworks each year and the majority are children. Although sparklers are legal in Maine, most parents don't realize that the temperature of the sparkler can reach 1800 degrees and can remain very hot after they've burned out."

Bisset said because sparklers are legal, the general public considers them harmless, however, "fire and medical experts know the opposite."

Bisset recommends attending only licensed public fireworks displays and avoiding private functions where fireworks are being used illegally.

He said the majority of injuries in the past were burns to hands, skin and eyes and to bystanders who were not handling the devices.

Bisset said among the banned items in Maine are: firecrackers, Roman candles, sky rockets and snakes, cherry bombs, party poppers, snap n pops and toy smoke devices.

ON TO NEW CHALLENGES—After 21 years at Gould Academy, Steve and Lynda Chandler, along with their son Peter, are leaving the school for new pursuits. But they'll still be spending plenty of time in Bethel.

Cohen amendment would help Maine finance restored train service

A measure co-sponsored by Senator Bill Cohen, designed to help bring passenger rail service to Maine was adopted last week by the Senate.

The legislation, an amendment to a larger surface transportation bill, would allow Maine and the two other states without Amtrak service to apply for federal funds to help offset the operating losses anticipated in the early years of restored service.

"I believe this amendment is an important step in making passenger rail service a reality for the people of Maine," Cohen said. "But the cost of Amtrak service will be high, and I believe this legislation will provide the necessary funding."

Amtrak estimates that before service could begin between Portland and Boston, a capital investment of about $50 million would be needed. That includes an estimated $30 million for right-of-way and facility improvements as well as $19 million for passenger cars and locomotives.

With three daily, 2-1/2-hour round trips, Amtrak predicts the service would carry some 223,000 passengers a year and generate $2 million annually in revenues. However, operating losses of about $3.4 million in the first year also are predicted.

Cohen's amendment would allow the state to apply for urban mass transit funds to offset a portion of the operating losses.

Walker's event added to Mollycoddett Day Race

The race committee planning the Mollycoddett Day Classic, a one mile fun run for ages 14 and under and a five mile open race, has added a 2-1/2 mile non-competitive walking event for all ages.

The one mile race will begin at 8:30 a.m. in front of the Bethel Inn. The five miles and walking events will begin at 9 a.m.

Sponsors, the Bethel Savings Bank, Sunday River Ski Resort, Central Maine Power, Groan and McGurn, and Pepsi Cola, as well as the organizers, Bethel Area Chamber invite participants to preregister before July 18 in order to ensure receiving a T-shirt.

The cost for preregistration is $4.50 for the one mile and $9 for the five mile and the walk. Day-of-race registration is from 7:45-8:15 on July 20 and is $5 for one mile and $10 for five mile and walk or $5 without the T-shirt.

The first 150 registrants will be guaranteed a beautiful commemorative T-shirt with a new design by Don Best. Registration forms are available at the Chamber office, True North, Prim's, Bethel IGA, Port Sports, and the Village Store in Bryant Pond.

Benefits package for Persian Gulf veterans

The Persian Gulf Veterans Benefits Act of 1991, Public Law 102-25, identifies the Persian Gulf War as a period of war for purposes of veterans' benefits. The inclusion places veterans of the Persian Gulf War on the same footing as veterans of World War II, the Korean Conflict, and the Vietnam era.

It defines the Persian Gulf War as the period beginning Aug. 2, 1990 and ending by presidential proclamation or law. Active-duty personnel and reservists or National Guard members called to active duty during the war are now eligible for the full range of wartime benefits after 90 days of active duty service.

One program based on wartime service is pension. Pension is a needs-based benefit for wartime veterans who have nonservice-connected disabilities rated totally disabling. Needy survivors of wartime veterans are also eligible for pension. In addition to pension, eligibility can now be established for the Department of Veterans Affairs guaranteed home loan program as well as a one-time treatment of dental conditions after discharge from the service.

Compensation, a major VA benefit, was not affected by the legislation. This program pays monetary benefits to veterans for disabilities incurred or aggravated during his or her service. There is no minimum active duty requirement for compensation.

For more information on these and other veterans programs, VA counselors may be reached by toll-free telephone anywhere in Maine, weekdays from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Those in the Augusta area may call 623-8000. Calls from rest of Maine may be made by dialing 1-800-827-0794.

Medicines and Foods:
Common Interactions

The ways medicines interact with each other are varied and complex. Little attention has been devoted by researchers to the interactions that occur between the foods we eat and the medicines we take. Some of these interactions should be avoided if possible, while other interactions between food and medicines are beneficial.

One of the most common interactions occurs in the stomach. While food may make some medicines less irritating to the stomach, absorption of most medicines is delayed by the presence of the food. This is the reason for instructions to either "take with food or milk" or "take on an empty stomach, one hour before or two hours after meals." Medicines that interact with foods or the nutrients in food include:

Blood thinners: Spinach and onions are rich in vitamin K, a vitamin which promotes the coagulation of blood. These foods can interfere with blood thinner medicine activity.

Antibiotics: The calcium in milk and dairy products can interact with antibiotic medicines such as tetracycline to make the antibiotic less effective.

Cholesterol-lowering agents: These medicines may interfere with the absorption of the fat soluble vitamins A, D, K, and E.

Local students graduated from Bates

Three local students were recently graduated from Bates College in Lewiston.

Two Telstar graduates, Traci Higgins and Karen Gould, and one Gould Academy graduate, Kurt Crandall were awarded bachelor of arts degrees at the college's 125th commencement.

Karen D. Gould is the daughter of Tibby York of East Bethel Road and George Gould of Chandler Hill, Bethel. An English major, Gould worked as a faculty assistant in the English Department and she was employed by the Edmund S. Muskie Archives and Merrill Gymnasium. She was active in varsity field hockey and intramural volleyball and a member of Amnesty International and the English Council. A dean's list student, she volunteered for campus blood drives.

Traci Higgins is the daughter of Carroll and Sharon Higgins of Locke Mills. A psychology major and dean's list student, she also was a Dirigo Scholar. The program recognizes high-school seniors from Maine who are in the upper 10 percent of their graduating classes and have shown leadership in their schools and communities.

While at Bates, Higgins was a member of the Psychology Society and the Interhouse Council. She was active in intramural sports and was a member of the women's varsity soccer, basketball and track teams.

She participated in the Fall Semester Abroad Program, studying in Australia. During her junior year she returned to Australia to study at the University of New South Wales in Sydney.

Gould Academy graduate Kurt R. Crandall is the son of Richard and Carole Crandall of Bethel.

A psychology major, Crandall was involved with The Movement, a campus volunteer organization and also volunteered for the Little Brother-Little Sister Program. During his senior year he was involved with the Community Volunteer Internship Program at the Great Falls School in Auburn, and he was a member of the outing club, the photography club and WRBC, the college's student-operated radio station.

A dean's list student, Crandall worked as a computing assistant and as a faculty assistant in the psychology department. An athletic trainer, he also took part in intramural sports. Also during his junior year he participated in the Washington and Lee University Exchange Program in Virginia.

Telstar students honored at University of Maine

A student team from Telstar High School was recognized recently at the University of Maine for demonstrating leadership and success in carrying out school improvement projects.

Diane Brennan, Adam Craig, Denise Coolidge and Lawrence Grover were among more than 200 students from more than 40 schools attending Teen Summit '91, the leadership component of the UM Aspiration Project.

They received a plaque for their work and progress on implementing their school improvement goals during the past year.

The awards, also including savings bonds, were provided by the Ronald McDonald Children's Charities of Maine. Other schools receiving awards were Indian Township School, Princeton, which received the trophy of the year award, Winthrop High School, and Maranacook Community School, Readfield.

The Telstar students were recognized for their accomplishments in generating school spirit and their campaign to stop smoking in the restrooms. Among their projects were selling T-shirts sporting the message "When you smoke, we choke," with sales benefiting the American Lung Association, and trivia contests to get students energized in the morning.

A Teen Aspirations Committee has been formed at Telstar to help develop and carry out goals. Students identified some of the objectives for next year as working on poor attitudes, teacher favoritism, and helping teachers to get to know students and their interests better.

Telstar Middle School students Jarrod Crockett and Brandi Brooks also attended the summit. Information about the Telstar students' participation in the summit is available from English teacher Heather Carson, who also attended.

A beautiful morning to start another week off, really the last week in June. How time does fly! The rain we got this past week was badly needed and did a lot of good for the gardens as well as everything else. May not be so nice to get out in but we need it once in a while to help the land from getting dry.

Russell's garden is looking good and we have put up our first greens of the year for the freezer. He needed to thin the rutabagas so we fixed the tops for greens and froze them.

Everyone asks why Russell puts plastic around his tomato plants but you should see how it makes them grow. He says they like the heat and guess they do. The plastic is about two feet high and the plants are showing over the top of the plastic already and a long way to go before they get their growth. Perhaps it is going to be another year for the six feet tall plants, who knows! Most of the seed had done well but the beets and carrots didn't come as they should have and neither did the cukes. He had to replant them and another thing that didn't come as well as the daisies, a radish. Guess one can't expect to have everything do well but as the price of seed one needs to have it do well.

Last Monday evening was a three point meeting for the Grange at Bryant Pond and we met with members from Oxford and Mt. Sugarloaf for the evening. Oxford members filled the offices and Mt. Sugarloaf put on the program. It seemed good to sit back and let someone else put on the program for a change. Next meeting will be on July 1 and we hope to have a speaker on nutrition. It is one of the many subjects that need to be brought to the attention of folks of any age. It will be C.W.A. night so hope to have as good a crowd as we did for the three point meeting.

I think it was Wednesday that Peggy and Russell went to the Chipman farm to pick strawberries but didn't get too many this time.

Myrna and Bernard White called on Peggy, her mother, one day this past week and have helped fix a new storm door for her home. Looks nice and will be a big help, I'm sure.

Saturday evening, Peggy and Russell went to Locke Mills for the dance while I stayed home and did puzzles and watched T.V. Gets very depressing at times not being able to do the things I like to do, but have to get by the best way I can. I was told there is another fellow who is taking therapy for a neck like mine and it is worse. I sure have sympathy for him. I know how painful that can be.

Sunday, Peggy went with Charlotte Cole and Iona Oscoe to a Hoof-nammy at Vera Emerson's home on the Yeager Road and met with other ladies for a good time. Russell and I worked on rutabaga greens for quite a while to freeze up some of them before they get any larger and get tough.

What a surprise Mary Lovejoy got last Friday when she went to school for their awards program. Her daughter Hope was the recipient of the highest award given and this was the first year for the Principal's award. It is given for responsibility shown by the student. What a wonderful feeling to have one's child receive such an award. The Humanitarian award was presented to Katie Buehl this year. Congratulations to both girls and keep up the good work.

Helena Bartlett of Bethel was a recent visitor at the Lovejoy's and spent the afternoon there.

Haven't seen any moose this week nor heard that anyone else has but have seen some tracks when taking a walk. They are around and more plentiful than in the past.

Take care one and all and have a good week ahead.

Really a hot one today June 27th, and the fire department pager has been busy. As reported in this weeks Citizen, one result of the Davis Conflagration (there's a word for you) the town has seemed to pull together and is trying to support the Davises. I am also glad to see that the Citizen is putting back names of their reporters with their articles.

Two friends in town have to go to the doctors, when I am not telling because of break-ins last week. I just hope these two friends get cured of what is ailing them and the are back in good health soon. Of course, they will get well!

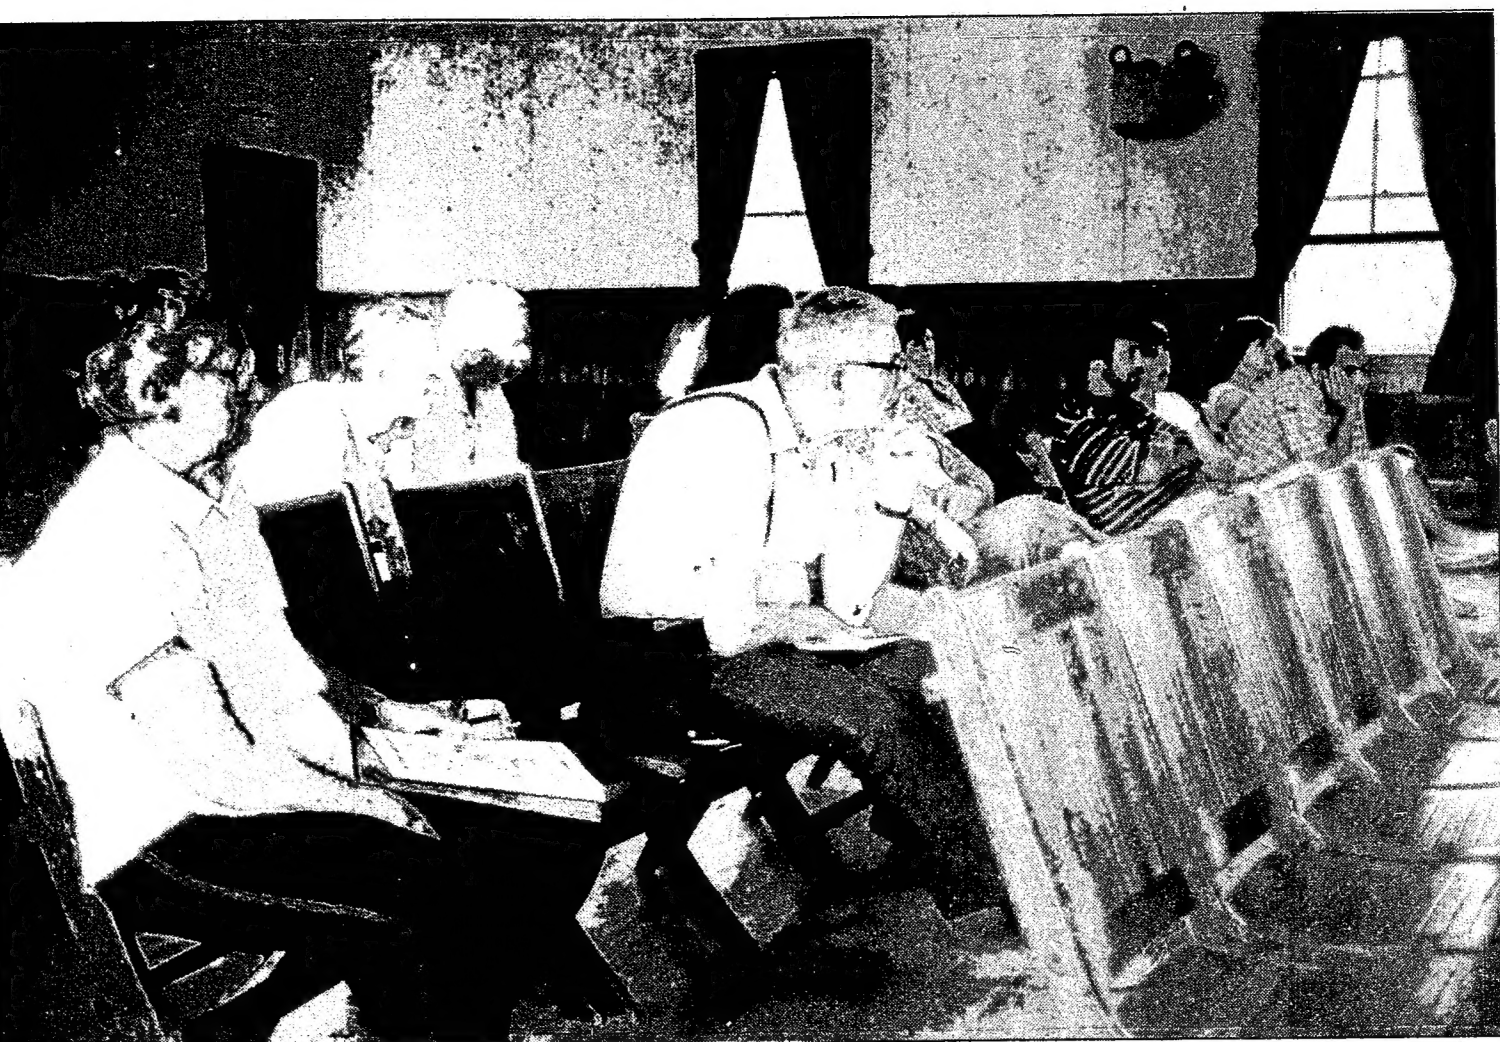

It looks like Super Peanut and Bethel's chief get along away from a fire call, especially when it comes to their kids (page eight). And to think I shake Rusty Jones' ladder every once in a while! Looks like Wendy Hanscom has some picture takers to be aware of (Brenda Wight and Ranger Ricky McVey)!

Last Friday, mother and I went on a hunt for some things that both of us needed. We went to Scarborough. I got a traffic safety vest, a lens cover for my flash light like they use to direct planes with and a book on fire protection administration. Also a tie tack for the Maine Federation of Fire Fighters. While there, met the man who delivered Newry's new dump tank.

I have been receiving in the mail a lot of booklets from FEMA, but not the ones that I have ordered. Can't expect much out of D.C. any more than from Augusta.

Congratulations go out to the Telstar girls softball team! I think whatever team plays the allstar 2nd team will meet one Shilo of a outfielder, and I know grandmother and grandfather Hutchins are proud of her!

Talk about being a little slow, yesterday as I stood in my driveway, a car came up and the people were looking for a plane crash. This had happened back in the 60's! They even had the wrong mountain. One acted like I was a "freak" and did not know anything about airplanes. Sent "Flatlanders" in a Maine car down to see Rena Powers. Let them try and be "Smart" with her! Stopped their smugness telling them I had worked for Grumman Aircraft. It's been a while since I've been around Galvanized Steel, so forgot how to put them in their place like he would. Thank goodness!

Mother just got a call from someone who she has known since the third grade. Funny how she can remember how and where they met so many years ago. She told me this morning the how and I'm 42 and I don't want to remember people from the third grade even if I could. Well the well is getting dry for writing so see you all next week.

Picked up from Oxford Pomona Grange news: Myra Foster is now an honorary member of Oxford Pomona.

By LORRAINE MILLS

The Greenwood Fire Department Auxiliary met Monday with Mary Stone, Barbara Dunham, Maggie Ring, Cheryl Young, Sally Melville and Lorraine Mills present. The Auxiliary accepted the resignation of Flossie Bernier with regret and elected Sally Melville to move from Vice President to President and elected Cheryl Young to fill the Vice President position.

Franz Martin, Los Angeles, Calif., has been visiting his mother Norma Knight and other relatives. On Thursday he visited his Aunt Mary Mills. Also on Thursday Mary had a cousin Robert Martin, South Paris and his sons, Stephen and Chuck, and Stephen's two children along with Robert's niece Kathy from Portland, call to see her. One day last week Mary also had another cousin Lloyd Sykes, from Portland call on her.

Correction: Vera Cross stayed with Mr. and Mrs. Robert Pound and Jason (Deana Smith) in Colebrook, Conn., instead of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Smith when she was in Connecticut to attend her niece's wedding.

Lorraine Mills took care of Gerry Shuman's animals while she and husband Joe were in New York visiting friends and relatives for a few days.

Sometimes it seems to be more of a cause for annoyance than a blessing to be concerned about living things, especially when different species of said living things are not compatible. Such was the case this week. A pair of swallows nested in the bird house under Vera's eaves. If the swallows would not dive bomb the cats it would help as the could not reach them if they would stay high enough but nesting swallows are a fierce lot and I had been trying to keep an uneasy peace between cats and birds for some time. Last week they were so busy feeding they did not have much time to police the cats but babies grow and get adventuresome. The trouble started Sunday when I heard a commotion and discovered a baby had fallen out of the nest and Pumpkin had grabbed it and was running with it after her. She was no more irate than I was and I made the mistake of chasing her too and after futilely chasing her around the house and Vera's garage twice I resigned myself to losing the baby. I thought mother bird had too as she was no longer following but as I came back home I looked back to the garage to see pumpkin following me. I called her and she dutifully came and gave me the little swallow (Alas, if it only used such patience to start with). To my surprise it was unhurt so obviously the next step was to get it back into the nest. I went for the stapler. Try to handle a stapler sometime with a baby bird in one hand. As I tried to open it it closed upon my hand. Now I have a bird in one hand and the other crushed between the legs of the stapler. Pain was the order of the day.

Desperately I gave a kick at the leg of the ladder which came open to free my hand but put out something in my knee. After all that, the ladder did not reach. Limping to the garden I enlisted the aid of my husband to bring the other ladder. Sounds calm enough doesn't it? I wish it were. I'm sure I was half hysterical by this time, looking back on it. Together we got the baby back into the house and I thought my troubles were over, but as I came into the house I found the mother bird dead on my floor. About that time if I had had a vat of boiling oil I might have been tempted to drop all my cats in. No doubt one of them was in the wrong spot at the right time and got her as she flew low after Pumpkin. Now there is only the father to feed the babies so in order to keep him safe I brought my cats all in and keep a close eye out for strays. By Tuesday I can not put much weight on my knee and I have a lot of weight to hold up so I took a chair and thought I'd sit outside. Life inside with a dozen unhappy cats, was not particularly appealing. Much to my surprise one of the little swallows came out of the nest and flew with the encouragement of half a dozen swallows. I never realized they were such communal birds. That left two in the nest and the others came back and tried to coax them out. I spent all day waiting but they hung tight. The next morning however Vera was outside when a bird came past her ear and it was the third little one who apparently followed the other siblings out only this one was too weak to fly. We tried several places to put him but it wasn't until I put him in the crotch of a tree he settled down. The father kept feeding him and at midday he took off. I thought he was going onto the ground again but daddy came and touched him and he rose up and was off to a high pine. By evening he was flying reasonably well and the next morning he was still being fed on the telephone wire but was doing a credible job of flying, so I let my cats out again. But father got in the last licks. He flew over, pecked one of my cats hard on the head and then flew away taking baby with him. Wednesday we had a couple dozen swallows around. Now they are nearly all gone from the area, favoring the bugs near the pond and fewer cats.

By CONSTANCE BROADBENT

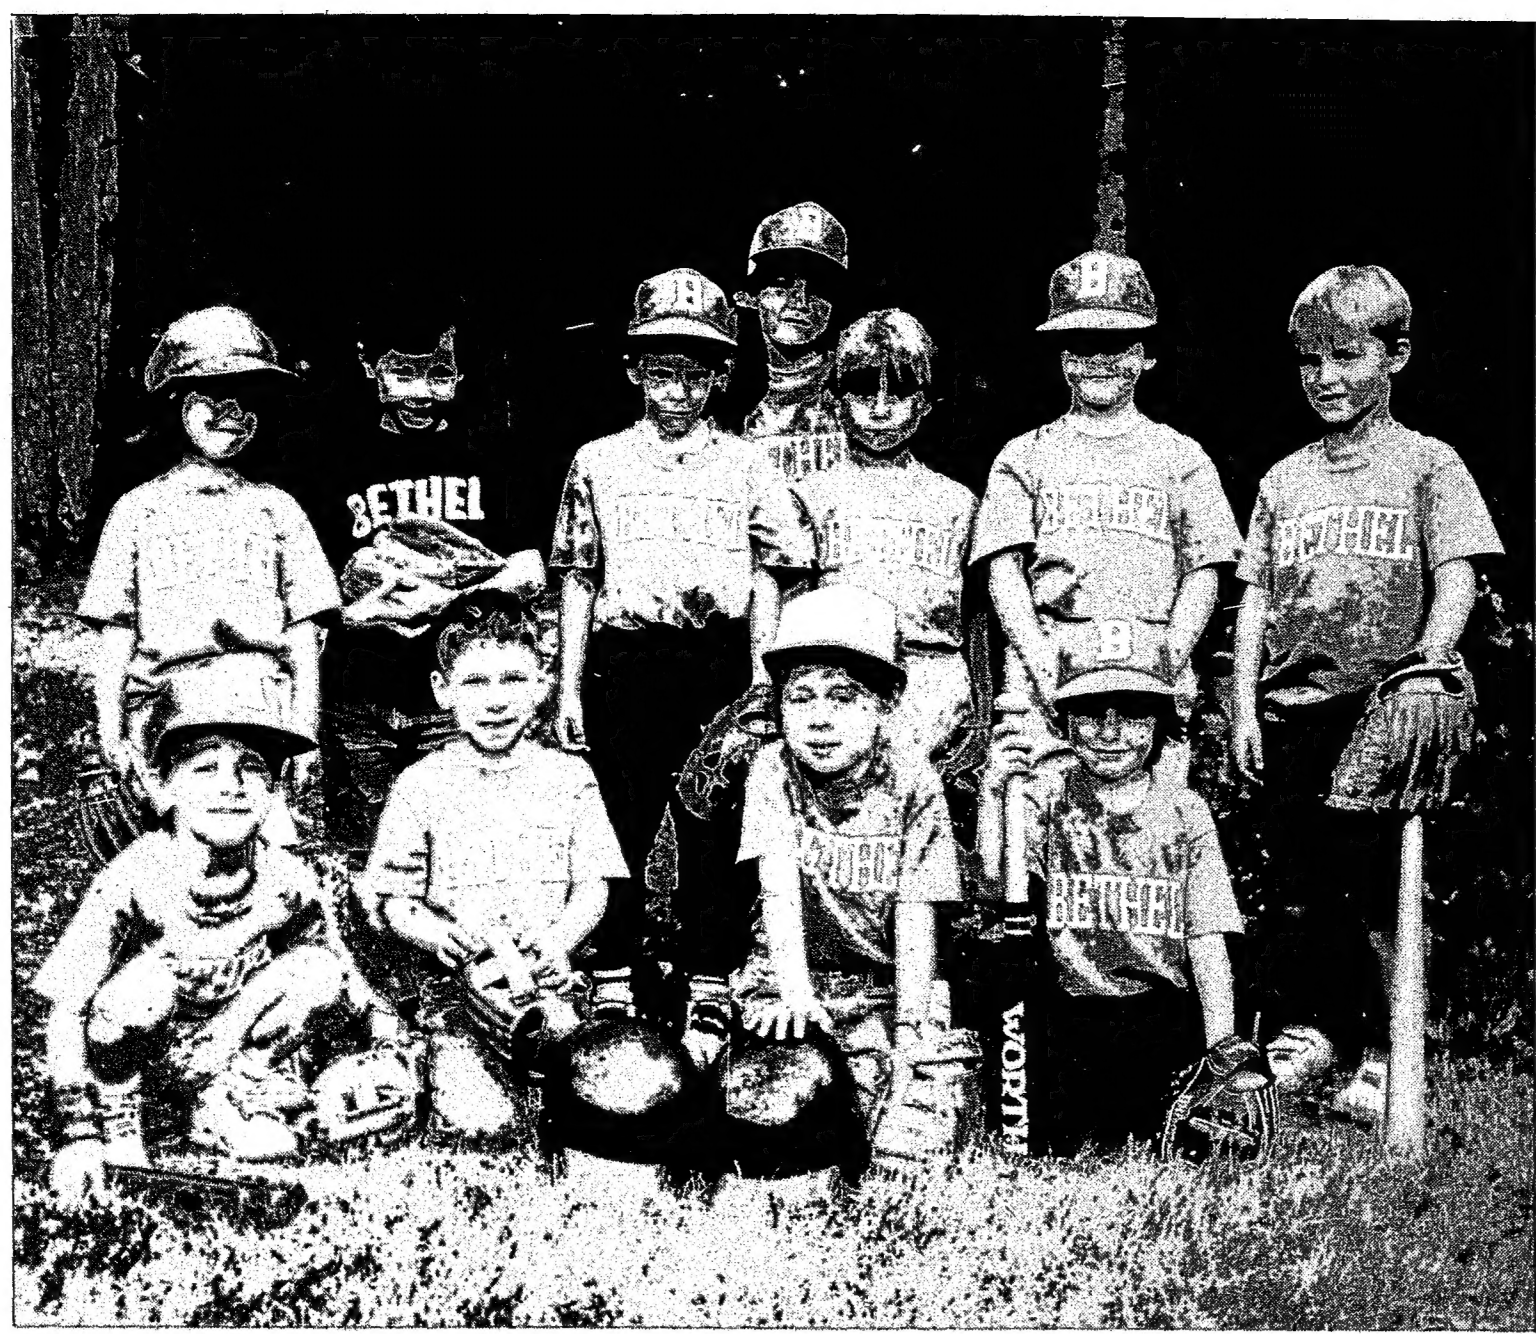

Dear Jeff,
You sang, and we were thrilled; you danced, and we were delighted; and then you spoke your lines like a trooper, and we knew... the family has another generation of actors! How wonderful it was for us to sit in your wee dinner theater and watch you and your fellow thespians ham it up on your tiny stage as you belted out your great big forties songs with your great big wonderful voices. Needless to say, it brought us right back to the 'good old days' when your mother tapped her way into peoples' hearts while her little brother, (your uncle, my mate) hammed and sang his way through all the minstrel shows in town.

Speaking of ham... that's what we grangers served to the senior citizens who gathered for their recent meeting at our hall in the village. Bethel Area Health Center Director, George Larsen limned the assets of his facility while the guests finished their dessert and coffee. And the group's president, Helen Saunders led a discussion of upcoming activities and trips... those people really get around.

And you can see by the tardiness of this letter, that we've been 'around' more than 'home'. We've made so many jaunts to the 'old country' lately, that we probably qualify for dual residency by now. The pizza-men are doing fine... averaging about eighty pies a day... pushing for an even hundred... They say, 'hello and congratulations'... tinged with just a bit of envy from Richard, the once and former scene stealer.

While we were away, things continued to grow at their own pace... The rose chafers grow in number on Linda's ornamental apple trees; the draft horses thrive in their summer placement on Farmer Korhonen's field. The dahlias are all arow at the Thayer estate, and popping their heads up in most of the spots that I chose for them in our gardens. Across the way, the peapods are plentiful in the Hodson 'bush'... three or four of them seem to be full grown already.

The Flat Road alone is teeming with life, Jeff, tame as well as wild. There are the usual sightings of deer and moose, accompanied by a recent appearance of 'Erer Bear'. Birds of all hues are plentiful this season. And because of our recent visit to your Topsham parents, I was able to identify the mystery visitor at our feeder... none other than Mrs. Rose-breasted Grosbeak. She was the one with the striped head, stripey, yellowish breast, bigger than a sparrow, smaller than a bread-box that I described in my last epistle. Now that we have her catalogued, we can concentrate on luring the orioles to our end of the valley. I can hear them in the orchards; I can see them if I go to Ma's yard or Alfred's porch. But oranges on the 'Bird-Pagoda-by-Donald' have done nothing to bring them into view. So I've resorted to a store bought sphere filled with alluring orange nectar... and I wait.

We are also waiting for Alfred to reappear on his porch one of these days. He recently abandoned the rest of the Merrills to their own devices, and checked into Maine Medical again. This time the dextrous doctors replaced Alfred's own tired mitral valve (that's heart talk) with that of a boarish donor. He is on the mend and anxious to return to his fauna and his fields.

Our police chief, Dale Bellman joined Alfred in the cardiac unit following a recent attack, and is resting and recuperating from by-pass surgery. The good news is that Dale will come over to the smoke-free side of the environment once he returns to his familiar surroundings.

And in the 'Yes, Virginia, There Is Good News Department'... we understand that all of the under-the-weather villagers are mending nicely. Olive Head is free of the pneumonia; Frances (Main Street) Bennett is free of her cataract; Josephine Kendall is free of her cast. Charlie Merrill is waiting to hear that he can hear, after a cochlear implant.

On our own little hill, we recently 'received' the maternal aunts, Gerrie and Gen and their friends, Josephine and Bea. The 'Girls' as they are affectionately known, motored up from Gray to enjoy the ambience and the entertainment provided by the master-of-ceremonies-in-residence. He sang, danced and cooked chicken for them, all the while regaling them with jokes and his own special brand of lunacy. They left tired, happy, and sans Gerrie's 'glass slippers' which I was delighted to mind for her for the ensuing days. You know my motto... 'Ply me with diamonds, and I'll follow you anywhere'... It's fun to wear them and it's extremely generous of my fairy godmother to allow it. That and laughter are the best medicine for any malingering blues, I always say.

Laughter abounds within a two-mile radius of 'this nibe', as you well know. No one can be sad for long when 'Donald Dehou' gets going. It's his special gift, and he is generous with it. I've promised to keep him in check while Alfred's and Dale's chestal areas are mending. Laughing is right up their their coughing for the moment... but I'm sure they'll both be reaching for their 'clutch pillows' in a week or two when they sense his approach.

We'd be delighted to sense your approach one of these days, dear Jeffery of the Boothbay stage. Perhaps between shows you and your girls could head for the hills and the serenity that abounds here. Meanwhile, continue to belt out your numbers and treat the attendees to a repast that charmed us all. We were really impressed with the impresari.

Hugs to Anna, and Frankie, Wyn and Ann, and an especially gentle one to Pepe.

Love, C.B.

GOWNS RETURN HOME—Jane Hosterman, left, president of the Bethel Historical Society, last week accepted the gown worn by Agnes Straw Mason, wife of Dr. Moses Mason, to Andrew Jackson's inauguration in 1833. The maroon silk dress is patterned, right, with flowers. Ruth Farrell, right, of Dover, N.H. presented the gown and also the one worn to the inaugural ball the same year. The gowns were donated by Mrs. Farrell's mother, Eugenia Shorrock, who bought them at an auction held before the society bought the house in 1974. The gowns will be on display at the Dr. Moses Mason House. (Photos by Wendy Hanscom)

On a day recently Mary and I walked to the bridge to view the pond. A little cottage once sat near by which I had to pass each day on my way to school. I thought about it today and of the people who lived there. Then one could easily be tempted to stop for a moment at this cottage, set well back and surrounded by green lawns where trees dropped their cool shadows. Watching their tips against the sky I could see them faintly stirring as if at the passing of an unseen presence. The water lapped on the shore, breaking in small ripples against the rocks. The liquid notes of birds far off in the woods repeated their notes of melody again and again.

The soft sound of water was nice then to listen to, just as today. I always looked toward the cottage as I passed and was greeted by a cheery "Hello" or a wave from the people sitting there.

Across the pond the mountains were printed sharply against the sky waiting the time for the sunset and daylight to fade away.

In my mind this same little cottage looked across the lawn of delicate shadings. Near its walls were the roses and some other shrubs placed there over the years.

The robins hopped over the lawns and I saw one today; as well as the swallows.

The ripple on the pond, the distant mountains, the birds, the calm light of the sun are the same but the cottage and the friends are gone; that touch of friendship is no longer there.

However memories such as these knit the days of the past with days of the present and so "Fairview" will always hold warm thoughts of other days.

As I wish each of you a happy and safe 4th I'll add a few lines from "Ring the Bell for Freedom".

"And when we greet the smiling sunlight, on the fourth of each July, We will ne'er forget the bellman who, betwixt the earth and sky, Rung out loudly, Independence; which, please God, shall never die. Author Unknown

June 20th, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Vatcher went to Massachusetts to bring his sister Fannie Whitten back for a couple of weeks visit.

Saturday, June 22nd Doris Pinkham from Dixfield and I went to Windham, to her brother's Everett Goff's and went to the wedding of his son James Goff to Jodi Kimball at the Gorham Christian Assembly Church. A beautiful wedding; then we went to the reception at the Italian Heritage Center, Westland Avenue, Portland. That night Mary Smith, Nina Whittier and I went to Locke Mills dance. I was really tired that night. Sunday I really took it easy.

Monday, June 24 Joe Vatcher and Howard Anderson went to Hebron to pick strawberries for our July 27 strawberry shortcake supper. They said it was very good picking, they were delicious.

Tuesday, June 25 Mary Smith and I went to the Concert in the Park in South Paris. The Indian Crow Band was very good, such a lovely evening.

Joe Kalinowski has had for company Bill Craft, Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Record, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Record, Doris Lawrence. Some nice ladies from Dixfield brought a picnic lunch and enjoyed some time with Joe. Strawberries are really early this year. People have been freezing and making jam.

My callers: Joe Kalinowski, Fannie Whitten, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Card, Doris Pinkham, Mark and Sherry Thayer, and Jason. Mark and I visited the Richard Peils.

I hope everyone will have a nice and safe July 4th and be very careful on the roads. People are so anxious to get to where they are going.

Organic Farmers receive grant for directory

The Maine Organic Farmers and Gardeners Association (MOFGA) has received a $21,000 grant from the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture's Low Input Sustainable Agriculture (LISA) Program to publish a directory of sustainable farming practices in Maine.

The directory will identify and describe practices that farmers are currently using to grow crops and livestock in environmentally sound and economically profitable ways.

MOFGA will arrange field days and farm tours beginning next year so that area farmers will be able to see sustainable practices as well as read about them. In addition, MOFGA will hold Farmer to Farmer Conferences in 1992 and 1993, designed to allow growers to exchange information about techniques and farm systems that work.

The LISA grant will also assist growers beyond the borders of Maine. MOFGA plan to prepare and disseminate materials to help organizations in other states carry out similar programs.

Organizations helping MOFGA to identify sustainable practices in Maine include the Cooperative Extension Service, Agricultural Council of Maine, and the Maine Association of Conservation Districts.

Farmers who would like to share their sustainable practices with others, or individuals who know of sustainable practices worth sharing, may contact MOFGA at P.O. 2176, August, ME 04338, phone 622-3118.

The race was sponsored by the Three Rivers Sportsman's Club. The participants paddled approximately 12 miles from the Twin Oaks Campground in Bethel to the bridge at Rumford Point. dedication and selfless service to her patients. The Employee-of-the-Year Award was created several years ago to recognize consistently outstanding performance and significant contributions to AHHS by employees in several categories: Urban Care Giver, Agency Support Staff, Rural Caregiver, and Supervisor of the Year. The awards are based on nominations from staff and selections are determined by a human resources committee of 18.

Fitzherbert, who provided services primarily to one family in Oxford County, is held in high esteem by her peers in the AHHS Norway office. "Mariyn had an unselfish attitude, a strong adherence to agency policies, and a willingness to assume new tasks. She was a valuable member of the team," said Gail Saunders, supervisor of AHHS Norway operations. Also recognized during the ceremony was Barbara Tracy, Home Health Aide, based in Norway, for completing 10 years of employment with the agency.

In addition, Deborah Crump, RN, Louise Eshleman, RN, Doris Munn, RN, and Faye Taylor, Certified Nurses Aide, were recognized for completing five years of service.

CHANNEL IV VIDEO TRAINING

There will be an eight-hour course in Beginning Video Production on Tuesday, July 9 and Tuesday, July 23 from 5:30-9:30 p.m. at Telstar High School.

William Dowling, media specialist with the Maine State Library, will be the trainer for the course, which is designed to prepare individuals to acquire video skills sufficient to produce programming for Channel IV, the community access station based at

They will learn about lighting and audio needs for recording in a variety of situations, and will become familiar with scripts and shot sheets. They will also learn about basic editing capabilities of their camcorders and the Channel IV equipment.

Participants are encouraged to use their own equipment—meeting the following criteria: four-head VHS or S-VHS with editing capability or flying erase heads or 8 mm with editing capability. Participants who do not have access to equipment may arrange for practice with Channel IV equipment.

The cost of this course, which is sponsored by SAD #44 Adult and Community Education, is $20. To enroll, call 824-2780.

CHAPTER I SUMMER PROGRAM

The Chapter One Summer Program starts the week of July 8 with class sites in Bethel, Andover and Woodstock.

Carol Stuart, Andover School, and Melanie Ellsworth, Woodstock School, will be the teachers. Assisting them are Mrs. Eva Bowers and Mrs. Joanne Riley, who have been on the Chapter One Staff at Ethel Bisbee School; and Mrs. Grace Simmons at Andover.

Stuart and Ellsworth both taught the Summer Program in 1990. This year they will be starting the fourth year, or first in the new three-year cycle, on the theme of Oxford County and Maine life and resources. With an environmental focus, they have chosen books and materials on the animals of the mountains and the coast.

The sessions will include six classroom periods at each of the three schools and a two-day field trip to the Portland coastal area.

At Ethel Bisbee School, the six days, with classes from 9 to 11 a.m., are July 10, 11, 12, 17, 18, and 19. Classes will be held in the annex.

At Woodstock and Andover, the classes will be July 8, 9, 15, 16, 22, and 23, also from 9 to 11 a.m.

The field trip, combining students from all of the classes will be held Wednesday and Thursday, July 24 and 25.

To date, over 40 students have enrolled at the three sites. Students are eligible who have been enrolled in a Chapter One program during the regular school year or have received a registration form in the mail.

Parents who have not yet returned a registration form but would like their child to attend the program should call the Chapter One coordinator, Natalie Timberlake at 824-2582 or 824-2234 for information.

Rotary Club notes

The new officers were installed at the Rotary meeting on Tuesday, June 25. Current president Scott Dennis handed the gavel over to new president David Murphy, who recognized his officers: Jeff Parsons, president elect; Jim Sysko, first vice president; Bruce Powell, secretary; John Head, treasurer; Scott Dennis, past president; Dewaine Craig, sergeant-at-arms. Directors are Melinda Remington, international service; Nancy Harrison, community service; Dennis Doyon, club service; and Dick Fain, vocational service. Before leaving the podium, Scott Dennis thanked all the members that made his year so memorable: Roger Conant, program chairman; Bruce Powell; Dewaine Craig; and his directors, Bob Saunders, Steve Wight, Melinda Remington and Dan Hart.

David Murphy pinned Scott Dennis with the traditional diamond Rotary lapel pin.

Dr. David Smith of Bethel was brought in to the club as a new member.

NEWS FROM CHANNEL IV

The Board of Directors of the Channel IV Association held their organizational meeting on June 25 at Telstar High School.

The following individuals have been appointed by their towns or the school district to the board: Bethel, Patricia Dooen and Cathy Newell; Greenwood, Richard Melville and Ron Smith; Newry, Eleanor Davis; West Paris, Jim Burke; Woodstock, Elton Cole and Roland Lord; and SAD #44, Cheryl Eliot and Charles Raymond. Newry and West Paris are entitled to an additional member, yet to be appointed.

The board approved by-laws and policies for the association, which is seeking to obtain non-profit status, and exchanged reports on progress of the channel to date. Programming has included softball play-off games, graduations and the dance recital.

The board expressed appreciation to film crews, Charlie Raymond, Donna Lunney, Kevin Saisi and David Hanscom.

Training will be provided in basic video production on July 9 and 23 through SAD #44 Adult and Community Education. Call 824-2780 for details. Volunteers are needed to play tapes and update the bulletin board. Training slots for those duties are available on Wednesday nights. Call 824-2780 to sign up.

A packet of information has been mailed to community organizations outlining procedures for the Bulletin Board, and for programming. Any organization that does not receive a packet may call 824-2780 to obtain one. Organizations are being encouraged to support Channel IV by becoming members and by sponsoring fund-raising events.

The next meeting of the Channel IV Association Board will be on Aug. 13 at which time officers will be elected.

NTL Notes:

Last weekend brought a new group of participants and staff for the NTL Institute programs entitled "Training Program in Laboratory Education," "Self-Differentiation," a professional work conference for NTL members, and a second members-only workshop on diversity.

The Orientation Session on Monday was led by Dorothy Vail-Weber, who is serving as overall dean for a four-week period. The Bethel speaker at the same session was Barbara D. Brown, who welcomed the NTL arrivals on behalf of the town and the Bethel/NTL Liaison Committee.

Chairwoman of the NTL Board of Directors, Darya Funches, spoke a few words of welcome to the participant assembly. She also introduced Leonard G. Hirsch, who was honored this year as NTL's first Kenneth D. Benne Scholar and whose particular interest lies in the area of ethics in politics.

The NTL Sunrise Seminars, informal 7:15 a.m. sessions, open also to interested members of the Bethel community, continued this week with staffers Gloria Fauth and Howard Lamb on Tuesday presenting "One Song, Many Voices"; and on Wednesday Carlos Gris discussing "Evil and Wholeness: A Transpersonal Framework for Diversity Work."

The seminars for the rest of the week continue as follows: Thursday, July 4, Alexandra Merrill, "Reflections on Natural Order in an All-Women's T Group"; Friday, July 5, Leonard Hirsch, "The Nether Side of Humanism"; and Saturday, July 6, Darya Funches, "Sow REAP It—Creating the Change You/We Want." In addition, a 7:15 a.m. Worship Experience will be led by Don Coverdale on Sunday, July 7; this is to be held at NTL's In-Tent, which is situated in the woods at the back of the NTL property.

MIDDLE INTERVALE HOUSE MEETINGS HAVE BEGUN

The Middle Intervale Meeting House Society meetings have begun for the summer.

The society meets every second Monday evening from June through September.

The annual meeting for the society was held on June 10 at the meeting house, with 17 members and guests attending.

Virginia Keniston and Mary Keniston reported on the plans for the annual Quilt Show, which will be held Saturday, Aug. 24.

The meeting house is also available for weddings, receptions, family renions and such. It was suggested that anyone interested in using the meeting house contact society president Lynn Boschetti, vice-president Geraldine Howe, treasurer Louise Annis or secretary Phyllis Dock.

The society's next meeting was held June 18 at the home of Lynn Boschetti.

The society noted that the meeting house's porch entry underpinnings needed attention.

They also discussed arranging a Sunday afternoon church service and possibly a folk festival this summer.

Plans were made for a cake sale on Mollycodd Day.

The group decided to post its summer happenings in the community calendar of The Bethel Citizen.

Anyone interested in joining or supporting the society can contact Geraldine Howe at 824-3188.

THOUGHTS FROM THE Pastor's Study

The Bethel Area Clergy Association, with the help of pastors of surrounding churches, brings you these meditations. Not based on any set theme, they will be individual for each pastor. It is hoped you will find in these words, comfort and help for your daily life.

"I lift up my eyes to the hills—/From where will my help come?/My help comes from the Lord/Who made heaven and earth." Psalm, 121:1-2.
There is no need to tell you that summer is here. As I write these words I am well aware that the past few days have been hot and humid. Moreover, by the calendar, summer officially arrived last week.

As one can recognize looking out the window, the mountains are mostly green, glowing with shades of green as the sun shines on them. And, the lakes and waterfronts are beckoning both local people and vacationers with their cool breezes and the fascinating calls of the loons. Then, in many a backyard the gardens are growing (I hope). Needless to say, beyond all the pleasures, there are those insects that tend to bug us human beings.

Yes, summertime is here. What does summertime mean to you? Perhaps, in part, it means:

- People tired from a busy year;
- People finding renewed energy in summer activities (reading, sitting in the backyard, taking time);
- Company and renewed friendships;
- Wonder and marvel in blossom around us—discovering the blossoming of a variety of wild flowers;
- Awareness of the gift of the dawning of each new day—with the birds providing an accompanying original fanfare, concert each morning;
- And, may we not forget it, a time for some rest and renewal.

Psalm 121 says "I lift up my eyes to the hills—My help comes from the Lord." Moreover, Jesus took time to be, to be in awe of creation, to rest, and to be renewed.
